

Innovate

Annual Report

The troubling national higher education data of the past few years remains virtually — and unfortunately — unchanged. Fewer high school graduates are entering college. Graduation rates for students of color lag behind. And millions of learners are leaving college with debt but no degree.

These stubborn challenges underscore the purpose and mission of College Possible: to provide a vital service absent from much of the nation's high schools. In an inequitable system amid an unstable world, College Possible offers students a safety net and the stability they need to enter college and complete their degrees.

Indeed, “stability” has been our watchword over the past year. I’m now in my second year of service to College Possible and am looking forward to building on our successes from my first year. Our desire for increased stability reinforced our recent decision to transition to full-time coaches. In my visits to our eight national sites, the students we serve told me it’s difficult to build a relationship with a new coach every year. In addition, moving to full-time success coaches offers continuity, expertise, dedicated support and greater long-term impact. We are also actively working with generative and predictive artificial intelligence to power up our coaches and students. Four themes stood out in the last fiscal year that epitomize how we have evolved the ways in which we support and serve students as the postsecondary landscape, and student populations, continue to shift:

INNOVATE: Embracing generative AI helped us innovate the way we work with coaches, and how they serve students

PARTNER: We continued and strengthened our existing partner and funder relationships to increase our reach

EVOLVE: Transitioning our coaches to be full-time employees (FTE) increased our capacity and ability to successfully serve students

INSPIRE: More than ever, we motivate students to persevere and succeed through mentorship and positive reinforcement

In fiscal year 2023, College Possible supported more than 25,000 students nationwide. Fueled by our 23 years of expertise and the student-focused innovations we are now incubating at our eight regional sites, we are scaling up efforts to empower greater engagement and success for even more students in the years to come.

Thank you for standing with us as we approach a quarter century of making college a reality for young people from underserved backgrounds. Your support remains vital to our work and the college dreams of students across the nation.

Sincerely,

Dr. Siva Kumari
Chief Executive Officer

Recent research by NCAN shows that FAFSA form completions were down nearly 40 percent through the beginning of April, and only around 28 percent of seniors have completed the application. The drop has been particularly significant for schools with higher percentages of low-income students and students of color. The lower rate of FAFSA completions and submissions will likely result in a commensurate decrease in enrollment in colleges and universities in the fall.

National College Attainment Network (NCAN)

Impacting the student experience through innovation

College Possible stands as a beacon of hope and opportunity for students from low-income backgrounds, striving tirelessly to make the dream of higher education a reality. Rooted in a vision where a student's future is determined by their talent, motivation and effort, our mission is clear: to make college admission and success possible through an intensive curriculum of coaching and support.

At College Possible, our core values of Student Success, Inclusive Culture, Teamwork, Impact, and Growth & Innovation drive every aspect of our work. As we reflect on our journey, we are proud to showcase our commitment to two strategic themes: Impact and Innovation.

IMPACT: Transforming lives nationwide

College Possible's impact reverberates across the nation, touching the lives of thousands of students and communities. Since our inception, we have empowered over 93,235 students on their path to earning a college degree. In the fiscal year 2023 alone, we reached over 25,000 students nationwide, a testament to our unwavering dedication to equity and inclusion.

Our reach extends far and wide, with regional sites from coast to coast. Each site embodies our commitment to diversity, serving students from underrepresented communities and providing them with the resources they need to succeed.

Across the nation, from Texas to Oregon, Illinois to Pennsylvania, College Possible's presence is felt, offering a lifeline to students striving to overcome barriers and achieve their dreams. Our impact goes beyond mere numbers; it is measured in the stories of resilience, determination, and triumph that unfold every day in classrooms and communities across the country.

INNOVATION: Pioneering change in college coaching

In our pursuit of excellence, College Possible continues to innovate, pushing the boundaries of traditional college coaching models. A pivotal shift in our approach lies in the transition to full-time employees (FTEs) for college success coaching, marking a significant step forward in our quest to better serve our students.

Although AmeriCorps remains the model for our flagship programming to high school students, the transition to FTEs for college success coaching addresses the breadth and depth of challenges facing college students. By employing FTEs, we provide 365 days of dedicated support to ensure stability for students and retention of institutional knowledge and expertise of coaches. Our pioneering efforts in program innovation have yielded promising results in Chicago, demonstrating the effectiveness of FTE coaching in enhancing student engagement and outcomes.

As we navigate the ever-evolving landscape of higher education, College Possible remains at the forefront of innovation, leveraging technology, data-driven insights, and best practices to drive meaningful change. From virtual coaching programs to strategic partnerships with colleges and universities, we are committed to exploring new avenues for growth and impact.

As we embark on the next chapter of our journey, College Possible remains steadfast in its commitment to empowering student success through impact and innovation. Guided by our core values and driven by our passion for change, we stand ready to overcome challenges, embrace opportunities and transform the lives of countless students across the nation.

Together, we will continue to push the boundaries of possibility, championing equity, inclusion and excellence in pursuit of a brighter future for all. Through our collective efforts, we will not only shape individual destinies but also build stronger, more vibrant communities where every student has the opportunity to thrive.

The student experience impacted by FAFSA

This year has been a particularly challenging one for high school seniors across the United States, largely due to the problematic rollout of the updated Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). Delays, technical issues and data errors have caused widespread uncertainty and frustration among students and families, significantly impacting the college application process. Amid these challenges, College Possible has increased our efforts to support students from underinvested communities, ensuring they have the resources and guidance needed to navigate this tumultuous period.

The FAFSA is a critical component of the college application process, serving as the gateway to federal grants, loans and work-study funds. This year, the U.S. Department of Education attempted to update and streamline the form, but the implementation was fraught with issues. According to a report by the Minneapolis Star Tribune, the Department announced that schools wouldn't be able to access students' financial aid information until March, weeks later than usual. This delay left students with less time to compare financial aid offers before the May 1 decision deadlines set by many colleges.

The consequences of this delay have been significant. Many students, especially those from low-income families, have found themselves unable to make informed decisions about their college futures. For example, Galawe, a high school senior served by our Minnesota site, lost her chance at several private scholarships due to processing delays. "The biggest challenge has been the waiting," she said, highlighting the frustration felt by many students.

Amidst this chaos, College Possible has been a beacon of support. Recognizing the severity of the situation, our executive directors lobbied state governments to address the impact of the FAFSA rollout. They have been vocal advocates for extending college decision deadlines and providing additional support to students affected by the delays.

Additionally, College Possible has hosted numerous FAFSA completion sessions, not only for students officially enrolled in their programs, but also for those who are not. These sessions have been crucial in helping students navigate the complicated application process, particularly those who encountered technical glitches or had questions about the new form. By offering these resources, we've helped mitigate some of the negative impacts of the rollout and ensured that students have the support they need to complete their applications on time.

College Possible's support has had a positive impact on many students. By providing one-on-one coaching, financial aid advice, and advocacy, we've helped students stay on track with their college plans. This support has been particularly crucial for students like Cuauhtemoc, a College Possible graduate from Omaha, who credited his success in navigating the college application process to the guidance and encouragement he received from his College Possible coach.

As the FAFSA rollout continues to pose challenges, we remain committed to our mission of making college accessible for all students, regardless of their background. Our proactive approach and unwavering support have been vital in helping students overcome the obstacles posed by this year's FAFSA rollout, ensuring they can still pursue their higher education dreams, despite the setbacks.

In conclusion, the FAFSA rollout this year has been a source of significant stress and uncertainty for many students. However, through lobbying efforts, support sessions, and personalized coaching, College Possible has played a crucial role in helping students navigate these challenges and remain on the path to higher education. We secured over $800,000 in funding to support students navigating the FAFSA process and began efforts to work with students served by College Possible and outside of the program, exemplifying our dedication to supporting students from underinvested communities and ensuring they have the opportunities they deserve.

Taking “a leap of faith” to help a college in crisis

Student success in higher education generally means obtaining a degree, but students can take multiple routes to reach that goal. While College Possible has traditionally focused on supporting learners as they persist and graduate from the school where they enrolled, in 2022, we agreed to help a small college in crisis blaze a new trail for its students. This remarkable — and ultimately successful — partnership with College Possible’s Catalyze student success programming proved fruitful for the college’s departing students, and it yielded lessons that College Possible can apply to future partnerships.

Founded in 2016, Catalyze is the largest postsecondary program within the College Possible ecosystem. Launched with 65 students in that first year, Catalyze now has 42 student success coaches embedded in 12 partner institutions serving 5,700 students nationwide. These near-peer coaches, recent college graduates who are serving a year of AmeriCorps service, are deploying a proven, evidence-based curriculum to help students from underrepresented communities navigate the college landscape and surmount common barriers so they can persist and earn their degrees.

College Possible typically partners with regional public universities with large numbers of Pell Grant-eligible students and significant student learning and graduation gaps. But the organization received an unusual request in December 2022: Presentation College, a private four-year institution in remote Aberdeen, South Dakota, was closing the following year. They asked College Possible to support its 408 remaining students as they graduated or transferred.

Supported by funding from SeaChange Capital Partners, which assists nonprofits working through complex organizational changes, we moved quickly to launch our Catalyze program on Presentation’s campus. The Catalyze team hired two former Catalyze coaches who had the knowledge and experience to begin building relationships immediately. Additionally, data systems and dashboards were quickly built to track student responses and progress on their transition checklists.

To get the word out about the new program on campus, we worked closely with admissions counselors (who were reorganized into transition counselors), deans who supervised academic divisions and student services, and sports team coaches (because 54 percent of Presentation College students played varsity athletics). To further raise awareness, the college and College Possible co-branded all materials about the transition. As Presentation College arranged 36 separate teach-out agreements, we built trust among the student body by making ourselves visible on campus. The Catalyze team set up tables in the student union, hosted coffee hours in the cafe, attended basketball games, did brief in-class presentations and entered students’ names into raffles if they agreed to meet with a coach and discuss their transition plans.

“It took a little while for us to gain momentum. Faculty and staff were looking for new jobs, while students at that point were still in that state of grief where they were paralyzed,” Catherine Marciano, vice president of partnerships at College Possible, told The Hechinger Report in 2024. But given time, she said, “We saw those emotions shift to, ‘OK, I have to figure out my next steps. I want to keep playing sports or keep pursuing my nursing degree.’”

The odds were stacked against Presentation College and College Possible. A 2022 report from the State Higher Education Executive Officers Association (SHEEO) found that fewer than half (47.1 percent) of students re-enroll at another institution after a college closure. But 78 percent of Presentation students responded to outreach from a College Possible coach — and 88 percent of students served by College Possible during the spring 2023 semester either graduated or transferred to another institution in the fall.

“We took on the project as a leap of faith with a do-no-harm attitude,” Marciano said. “We never imagined that our results would be as good as they were.”

AI: Innovating for increased impact

For the past 23 years, College Possible has served more than 93,000 students across the country. Today, guided by CEO Siva Kumari, we are leveraging the experience of the past two plus decades and harnessing it through the power of AI to navigate a rapidly changing educational landscape and a dramatic evolution in student needs, expectations and desires.

Through a partnership with Salesforce, the global leader in customer relationship management (CRM) software and applications, College Possible is developing new generative AI solutions that will help coaches better support and assist students as they take control of their educational experience.

“It’s critical that College Possible works with good partners that allow us to innovate and move our program model forward,” said Scott Del Rossi, College Possible’s vice president of college and career success. “Salesforce believes in our vision of reaching more students and having an even greater impact on their lives. Its support allows us to think boldly to truly increase our impact.”

Salesforce is a longstanding and valued College Possible partner. The Salesforce platform serves as the technology foundation for CoPilot, our industry-leading comprehensive data information system. CoPilot leverages more than 20 years of College Possible’s access and success expertise to provide colleges and universities with detailed insights into the academic, financial and social well-being of their students.

In 2023, College Possible was selected to be among the first six participants in the Salesforce AI for Impact Accelerator, designed to help purpose-driven nonprofit organizations fully understand, adopt and invest in emerging technologies such as generative AI. Pro-bono Salesforce experts contributed 166 volunteer hours to support College Possible’s digital transformation.

Let’s face facts: Our near-peer coaches have a nearly impossible task. Not only must they be experts in college applications and financial aid, they need to understand the unique policies of multiple colleges; promote best practices for studying and time management; and know the strengths, challenges and dreams of each student they coach. College Possible coaches are busy, and sometimes students must wait for responses from their coaches. College Possible’s reach and impact, then, is limited by the number and individual capacity of our coaches.

To scale and increase College Possible’s impact, we’re building a new platform that has the power to serve more students more effectively and more efficiently. We’re constructing a knowledge base from our proven and evidence-based curriculum, two decades of coaching and staff expertise and research, and numerous student metrics. The result will be a more precise, more adaptable, more student-centered program.

Our vision is to use Salesforce and generative AI technology to put 20 years worth of experience and information at the students’ fingertips. The Salesforce platform will provide 24-7 asynchronous access to the College Possible curriculum and knowledge base, while allowing students to access their academic records, engage with a coach, and manage their progression through college. AI tools will generate individualized student experiences, including tailored assistance based on their specific questions and challenges and automated reminders prompting them to complete tasks and meet deadlines.

This new approach will not replace our coaches. Combined, the Salesforce platform and generative AI will allow our coaches to adapt rapidly and proactively to the quickly changing realities of student life. Coaches will have the digital data and insight to more closely monitor students and better support institutional partners. By being relieved of some of their administrative burdens, coaches and support staff can personalize their coaching, deliver more-targeted, high-impact sessions to individual students, and spend more time on what really matters: supporting students throughout their college journey.

“Coaches are best-positioned to address the many nuances of the student experience in college,” said Josh Newby, director of curriculum and instruction at College Possible. “But we know students are engaging with coaches on their phones and tablets — and on their schedules, not ours. Salesforce is helping us harness generative AI technology so we can continue to evolve and meet students where they are.”
